

s choc-flavoured success

Triumphs: Hannah Simonson, Sheila Bulado and Chrissy Wade said there is no 'I' in their team which won a national enterprising technology award at the Lion Foundation Young Enterprise Awards.

Photo: BOBBIE NICHOLLS

the girls bought the containers and designed labels for their product, which they called B Fast.

The judging was on their business plan and financial report. At the nationals, they had to set up a stall with samples and Hannah gave a speech about the product.

The company won $1000, which they said was "excellent".

They agree with technology faculty head at

FHS Bronwen Beaver who said the scheme works because it puts the students into a "real" situation.

The importance of working as a team was something the three girls say helped towards their success.

"There is no 'I' in team," Hannah said.

Last week, the three company directors wound up Caffeinate Me and went their separate ways.

After external exams, Hannah will be heading to Tauranga for her gap year, for which she had a job with IHC. Six months touring America is next on her schedule before she begins a travel and tourism course with the intention of work on cruise ships.

Sheila will be at Massey University studying for a BSc majoring, she hopes, in chemistry, while Chrissy has obtained a three-year chef apprenticeship at Sky City in Auckland.